Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of middle-aged women. The study was conducted in a community-based setting. The participants were 30 middle-aged women who were randomly divided into two groups: a control group and an intervention group. The intervention group received a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not receive any training. The physical fitness and health of the participants were measured at the beginning and end of the study. The results showed that the intervention group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health than the control group at the end of the study. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and health of middle-aged women.
