Illustrative Term 1: Group-mediated activities
(10 only - Circle)

Define the following terms:

Interference - impediment that gets in the way of the information being processed, the organization, the presentation, the encoding, the retrieval, the storage, the use of the information.

Group interference - interference is caused by thought being put toward both the understanding of information, the search for information, and the organization of thought in a way that interferes with the processing of the thought itself.

Groupthink - thinking is compromised by group conformity and homogeneity like an echo.

Group - the social unit that is the subject of study in group psychology (usually, the researchers that study groups is much smaller than the size of the group).

Group - individuals who make an image by interacting with each other.

Groupthink - thinking is compromised by a group setting where people agree.

Groupthink - the author's concern for making the group.

Group - a social unit that is the subject of study in group psychology (usually, the researchers that study groups is much smaller than the size of the group).

Groupthink - a social phenomenon in which conformity is a group's goal.

Answer each of the following questions about the readings in this chapter and during this unit:

1. What did the researchers discover regarding the group's interference and interference?
