QUESTION: A patient with a recent diagnosis of schizophrenia is being treated with a second-generation antipsychotic. The patient is experiencing weight gain and is concerned about this side effect. The nurse is planning to provide education to the patient about this side effect. Which of the following is the most appropriate response by the nurse?

ANSWER: The nurse should provide education to the patient about the side effect of weight gain. The nurse should explain that weight gain is a common side effect of second-generation antipsychotics and that it can be managed. The nurse should provide information about the importance of maintaining a healthy diet and regular exercise routine. The nurse should also provide information about the importance of taking the medication as prescribed and not stopping it abruptly. The nurse should provide information about the importance of regular monitoring of weight and blood sugar levels. The nurse should provide information about the importance of regular follow-up appointments with the healthcare provider. The nurse should provide information about the importance of seeking medical attention if the patient experiences any other side effects.
