

Rehabilitation Therapy Doses Are Low After Stroke and Predicted By Clinical Factors

510 subjects recruited during acute stroke admission in the United States were followed serially for at least 3 and up to 12 months. Subjects were asked to report total PT, OT, and ST sessions.

Cumulative therapy counts were calculated at three, six, and twelve months following stroke. Negative binomial regression examined whether demographic and clinical factors were associated with subsequent therapy counts.

Subjects Receiving No Therapy at 90 Days Post-Stroke by Discipline

- Rehabilitation therapy during the first year of stroke recovery is low overall.
- Most demographic factors did not predict therapy dose.
- Severity of clinical factors during acute stroke admission and measures of impairment and function assessed at 3 months after stroke predicted subsequent cumulative therapy doses.
- Approximately 1/3 of stroke patients do not receive any therapy during the first year of stroke recovery in the United States.

PT = Physical Therapy
OT = Occupational Therapy
ST = Speech Therapy

Visit 2 was conducted approximately 90 days post-stroke
