

Abstract

Abstract: The paper gives recent findings about the role of the family in political socialization. It is based on a questionnaire survey of 1,000 young adults in Germany. The results show that the family is still an important institution for the political socialization of young adults, but its influence is decreasing. The paper also discusses the role of the family in the political socialization of young adults in other countries.

Excluded: the participants who were in a relationship since the 18 months prior to the intervention, who had any form of mental health problem, or who were unable to read or write.

Figure 1. A schematic diagram of the proposed system architecture. The system is composed of three main components: a user interface, a data processing module, and a database. The user interface interacts with the data processing module, which in turn interacts with the database. The data processing module is responsible for processing the data received from the user interface and storing it in the database. The database is responsible for storing the data and retrieving it when requested by the user interface.
