

Abstract

Experts in the field of fashion and psychology have contended that clothing gives information about the wearer's identity, while also delineating and communicating social identity of the wearer to the surrounding observers. Clothing (along with other personal accessories) categorizes the wearer as belonging to a certain social and economic class (rich/poor; urban/rural dweller; chairperson/factory worker), of a specific gender (like a male or a female member of the society), age (children, young adults, adults, or old people), and profession (like doctor, lawyer or a priest). Therefore, one can conclude that clothing is a mode of communication (nonverbal), which creates the first and a lasting impression of the wearer, on the observer. It is almost impossible to wear clothes without revealing to some extent the personal and social identity of the wearer, and his or her view of the world. The present study explores all existing links between clothing and personal identity, and derives that a close relationship exists between the two at different levels, while taking into consideration the wearer's gender, age, social class, religion, ethnicity and symbolism of clothing.

characterised by a developed institutional reflexivity In the current period the globalising tendencies of modern institutions are accompanied by a transformation of day to day social life having profound implications for personal activities The self becomes a reflexive project sustained through a revisable narrative of self identity The reflexive project of the self the author seeks to show is a form of control or mastery which parallels the overall orientation of modern institutions towards colonising the future Yet it also helps promote tendencies which place that orientation radically in question and which provide the substance of a new political agenda for late modernity In this book Giddens concerns himself with themes he has often been accused of unduly neglecting including especially the psychology of self and self identity The volumes are a decisive step in the development of his thinking and will be essential reading for students and professionals in the areas of social and political theory sociology human geography and social psychology
