

Fractured Fairytales

(point of view / characterization)

What is a fractured fairy tale?

A fractured fairy tale is a story that uses fairytales you know and then changes the characters, setting, point of view, and/or plot.

Your task

Take your chosen fairytale and write your own fractured fairytale. You will need to change the point of view. Rewrite the fairytale from another character's point of view.

- read some fairytales to refresh your memory
- decide which fairytale you want to rewrite from another character's point of view. For instance, did you ever think how the fairy godmother felt after turning the pumpkin into a coach OR how Jack's mother felt when he disappeared up the beanstalk?
- complete the planning sheet to assist your writing
- you may also change anything else in your fairytale such as the setting
- your tale must include dialogue between characters
- extra credit: present a role-play to the class using props and no more than two friends

Reading with a Difference Arthur F. Marotti, 1993 Reading with a Difference is a collection of eighteen essays that examines how issues of gender race and cultural identity inform texts from the seventeenth century to the present Together the contributions document recent significant shifts occurring in the theoretical approach to the texts they study and illustrate how shifts in each of these categories affect how the others are viewed The first section of this anthology explores the notion that identity particularly gender identity is a cultural construct The essays in the second section consider ways in which race and gender intersect with cultural identity and how encounters between different cultures challenge any identity constructed in isolation First published in the journal Criticism these essays offer no blueprint for reading Instead they encourage a rereading of canonical texts and a questioning of how these texts face matters of gender race and cultural identity how they respond to the differences and the incongruities within the cultures from which they arise and to which they speak
