

1. There was no organization in the instructions. The instructions should be written as a "... basic three-part structure of introduction, body, and conclusion (Kocher 1988)." The instructions provided above failed all steps with step one, there's no instruction or how to turn on the device. There's no review of instructions or how to troubleshoot problems in the conclusion.
2. There is no defined audience for those instructions. With a clear audience, that will depict the "... level of difficulty your readers, begin with the topic (Bauer)." If the target audience is for people who are familiar with technology, the instruction don't have to go as far as we did with it. If the target audience was aimed for people that are not so tech savvy, then the instructions would have to be done as follows:
3. There's no equipment needed list. That should be at the beginning of the instructions manual. With the equipment list, it could leave the reader with unanswered questions "What cord attached to the computer? Is laptop the recording? Questions such as that could be easily answered with an equipment list.
