Cas9 technology has revolutionized gene editing The Nobel prize for chemistry was awarded to Emmanuelle Charpentier and Jennifer Doudna the scientists responsible for its discovery in 2020 and it is considered the frontier of sophisticated medical science This technology contains the promise that both gene therapy and eugenic control of human evolution is possible even plausible in our near future This book looks at these developments in the context of the history of previous social and scientific attempts at genetic editing and explores the policy and ethical challenges they raise It presents the case for altering the human germ line which contains and controls hereditary genetic information to eliminate a large number of genetic diseases controlled by a single or few genes while pointing out that gene therapy is likely to be ineffective for diseases with more complex causes In parallel it explores the possibility of genetic enhancement in a set of case studies But it also argues that in general genetic enhancement is ethically problematic and should be approached with caution Given the success of CRISPR Cas9 gene editing and the explosion of related techniques in practice it would be virtually impossible to ban germ line editing in our future A more useful goal is to put regulation in place with oversight that represents the interests of society That in turn requires an informed public discussion of these issues which is the intention of this book

Planarian

Regeneration H. V. Brøndsted, 2013-10-22 Planarian Regeneration deals with regeneration problems including embryogenesis and morphogenesis The book compares the principles involved in the regeneration processes with those in ontogenesis from the egg The author also reviews the works of Thomas H Morgan and Charles M Child which became the basis for systematic scientific investigation of regeneration The head regenerates vigorously with a faster rate behind the eyes then at various levels along the longitudinal axis of the planarian body A time graded regeneration includes inhibitory forces and some genetic codes that determine such rate The time graded field has been proven by transplantation experiments the author addresses the morphological structure to which biochemical factors or processes determine the different rate of regeneration He notes that the nervous system conforms to these processes as shown by studies of Lender and Klein 1961 The author suggests that the study of regeneration in planarians should involve time considerations quantitatively to explain some substance if any from the nervous system that activates the cytoplasm of neoblasts and then the genome This book will prove valuable for zoologists and researchers in genetics biochemistry or molecular biology
