

Probability Questions

- 1) A hamburger chain found that 75% of all customers use mustard, 80% use ketchup, and 65% use both, when ordering a hamburger. What are the probabilities that
 - a) A ketchup-user uses mustard?
 - b) A mustard-user uses ketchup?
- 2) Suppose 50% of the cars are manufactured in the United States and 15% of these are compact; 30% of the cars are manufactured in Europe and 40% of these are compact; and finally, 20% are manufactured in Japan and 60% of these are compact. If a car is picked at random from the lot, find the probability that it is a compact.
- 3) Suppose that a test has been discovered for a disease that affects 2% of the population. In clinical trials, the test was found to have the following error rates:
 - a. 8% of the people free of the disease had a positive reaction ("false alarm").
 - b. 1% of the people having the disease had a negative reaction ("missed alarm").

A mass testing programme is being proposed for the whole population; anyone with a positive reaction will be suspected having the disease, and will be brought to the hospital for further observation.

- (a) Of all the people with positive reaction, what proportion actually will be free of the disease?
 - (b) Of all the people with negative reaction, what proportion actually will be free of the disease?
 - (c) Of the whole population, what proportion will be misdiagnosed one way or another?
- 4) Thirty percent of the managers in a certain company have MBA degrees as well as professional training. Eighty percent of all managers in the firm have professional training. If a manager is randomly chosen and found to have professional training, what is the probability that he or she also has an MBA?
- 5) The probability that a graduating student will get an offer for job A is 0.35 and the probability that this student will get an offer for job B is 0.20. If the probability of this student getting both job offers is 0.05, what is the probability that this student will get at least one of the two job offers?
- 6) A company has two production lines for plastic bottles, A and B. Two percent of the bottles coming off of line A are defective, and 8% of those off of line B are defective. If a bottle is selected at random and found to be defective, what is the probability that it came from line A?
- 7) A production process is known to produce a particular item in such a way that 5 percent of these are defective. If two items are randomly selected as they come off the production line, what is the probability that both are defective (assuming that they are independent)?
- 8) A company is considering producing some new products. Based on past records, management believes that there is a 60 percent chance that the first product will be successful, and a 40 percent chance that the second product will be successful. As these products are completely different, it may be assumed that the success of one is totally independent of the success of the other. If two products are introduced to the market, what is the probability that both are successful?
