Ordinary People by Judith Guest is a book that's being told by 2 different perspectives, the protagonist Conrad Jarrett and the antagonist Calvin Jarrett, who also is Conrad's father. The point of view of each side is in every other chapter. Conrad is a character dynamic in the story, who will change his perspective in seeing things. As the year progresses, Conrad becomes interested in this girl name Jeannine Pratt, who just move to Lake Forest. They go on dates and spend a lot of time together. That spring his parents decided to go on a get away vacation just for two of them, since Beth believes Calvin worries too much about and needs some time to relax. So Conrad goes stay at his grandparents house. One day, He saw in the newspaper that his friend Karen has committed suicide and past away. He was very shock about this. The only thing that was on his mind was about his suicide attempt, his time with Karen, and his decent brother. Immediately, that night he called Berger and ask to meet up with him immediately. Conrad finally comes to realize that he has been living in Buck's shoes. Like Berger said, he needs to live for himself and for others, and needs to open up for a change. From then on, he began to let his inner self heal and enjoy his relationship with Karen. Soon after, his mom move to Europe when they returned from the trip. Conrad and his dad move to Evanston and started a new life. Conrad starts to open up to Calvin more, instead of blocking him out of this
