Abstract 10: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week resistance training program on the muscle strength and power of older adults. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The participants were 20 older adults (mean age = 70.5 years) who were randomly assigned to either a resistance training group or a control group. The resistance training group performed a 12-week program of resistance training, while the control group performed a 12-week program of stretching. The primary outcome was the change in muscle strength, measured by the 1RM of the leg press. The secondary outcome was the change in muscle power, measured by the 10RM of the leg press. The results showed that the resistance training group had a significant increase in muscle strength and power compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week resistance training program can improve muscle strength and power in older adults.

QUESTION Which of the following is not a characteristic of the normal distribution?

ANSWERS

1. The mean, median, and mode are all equal.
2. The distribution is bell-shaped.
3. The area under the curve is equal to 1.
4. The distribution is skewed to the right.

ANSWER 4. The normal distribution is symmetric and bell-shaped, meaning it is not skewed to the right or left. The mean, median, and mode are all equal in a normal distribution, and the total area under the curve is equal to 1.

Figure 1: A hierarchical tree diagram showing the classification of 1000 samples into four categories: Category 1, Category 2, Category 3, and Category 4. The tree starts with a root node 'All' which splits into 'Category 1' and 'Category 2'. 'Category 1' further splits into 'Category 1.1' and 'Category 1.2'. 'Category 2' splits into 'Category 2.1' and 'Category 2.2'. 'Category 3' splits into 'Category 3.1' and 'Category 3.2'. 'Category 4' splits into 'Category 4.1' and 'Category 4.2'. The diagram illustrates the hierarchical structure of the data used in the study.

QUESTION A 60-year-old male with a 20-year history of type 2 diabetes mellitus presents with a 2-week history of increasing fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. He reports frequent urination and increased thirst. His medical history is significant for hypertension, hyperlipidemia, and chronic kidney disease (stage 3). He is currently taking metformin, lisinopril, and atorvastatin. His last hemoglobin A1c was 8.5%.

ANSWER The patient's symptoms and history are highly suggestive of uncontrolled diabetes mellitus. The most likely cause is a failure to adhere to his medication regimen or a change in his metabolic state. The increased urination and thirst are classic signs of hyperglycemia. The weight loss and fatigue suggest a catabolic state due to chronic hyperglycemia. The patient's HbA1c of 8.5% indicates poor glycemic control. The most appropriate next step is to perform a fasting blood glucose test and a repeat HbA1c to confirm the diagnosis and assess the severity of the hyperglycemia. If the results confirm uncontrolled diabetes, the patient's medication regimen should be reviewed and adjusted accordingly. This may include increasing the dose of metformin or adding a second-line agent such as a sulfonylurea or an insulin analog. The patient should also be counseled on dietary modifications and the importance of adherence to his treatment plan. Regular monitoring of blood glucose levels and HbA1c is essential for long-term management.

QUESTION Which of the following is not a characteristic of the Staphylococcus aureus bacterium?

ANSWER Staphylococcus aureus is a Gram-negative, spherical bacterium. It is a facultative anaerobe, meaning it can grow with or without oxygen. It is a common cause of skin infections, such as abscesses and boils, and is also a common cause of food poisoning. It is not a Gram-negative bacterium.

102 QUESTION Which of the following is not a characteristic of a good research question?

ANSWER ☐ It is broad and general.

QUESTION Which of the following is not a characteristic of a good research question?

ANSWER ☐ It is broad and general.

1. Identify the problem. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the symptoms and the context in which they are occurring.

2. Generate hypotheses. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to generate hypotheses. This involves brainstorming potential causes and solutions.

3. Test the hypotheses. The third step is to test the hypotheses. This involves gathering data and conducting experiments to determine which hypothesis is most likely correct.

4. Implement the solution. Once a hypothesis has been tested and found to be correct, the next step is to implement the solution. This involves putting the solution into practice and monitoring its effectiveness.

5. Evaluate the results. The final step is to evaluate the results. This involves assessing the outcomes of the solution and determining whether the problem has been successfully resolved.

QUESTION My 10-year-old son has been having a cough and cold for the last 2 weeks. He has been taking paracetamol and cough medicine, but nothing seems to be helping. What should I do?

ANSWER Your son's cough and cold may be a sign of a viral infection, such as the common cold or influenza. These infections are usually self-limiting and will resolve themselves within a few weeks. However, if your son's symptoms persist or worsen, it is important to consult your GP. They may be able to prescribe antibiotics if there is a bacterial infection, or other treatments to help with the symptoms. In the meantime, you can try to keep your son hydrated and encourage him to rest. You can also use a humidifier to help with his cough.

1. Identify the main components of the system. The system consists of a client application, a server application, and a database.

2. Describe the architecture of the system. The system is a client-server architecture. The client application is responsible for user interaction and data entry. The server application is responsible for processing requests and managing the database. The database is responsible for storing and retrieving data.

3. Explain the data flow between the components. The client application sends requests to the server application. The server application processes the requests and interacts with the database to retrieve or store data. Unit testing is used to verify the functionality of individual components. Integration testing is used to verify the interaction between components. User acceptance testing is used to verify that the system meets the requirements of the users.
