10.10 Explain the difference between a "strong" and a "weak" password.

- The major drug classes used to regulate heart rate are:
 - beta-blockers
 - calcium channel blockers
 - digoxin
 - atrioventricular node blockers
- beta-blockers are the most commonly used drugs to regulate heart rate. They work by blocking the effects of adrenaline on the heart, which slows down the heart rate.
- calcium channel blockers work by blocking the entry of calcium into the heart cells, which also slows down the heart rate.
- digoxin is a cardiac glycoside that increases the force of contraction of the heart muscle, which can also slow down the heart rate.
- atrioventricular node blockers are used to treat atrial fibrillation by slowing down the electrical conduction between the atria and the ventricles.

3. Interpretation of the data
Interpretation of the results of the study is the most important part of the study. It is the process of making sense of the data and drawing conclusions from it.
4. Conclusion
The conclusion is the final statement of the study. It is the result of the interpretation of the data and the answer to the research question.
5. References
References are the sources of information used in the study. They are listed at the end of the study and provide a way for others to find the information.
6. Appendix
The appendix is a collection of additional information that is related to the study. It can include things like raw data, questionnaires, or other documents that were used in the study.
7. Index
The index is a list of terms and their locations in the study. It is used to help readers find the information they are looking for.
8. Table of contents
The table of contents is a list of the sections of the study and their page numbers. It is used to help readers find the information they are looking for.
9. Abstract
The abstract is a short summary of the study. It is usually the first thing that readers see and is used to decide if they want to read the full study.
10. Introduction
The introduction is the first part of the study. It provides background information on the topic and states the research question.
