|--------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Challenges         | Arguments for income generated by governments (especially water) that would finance planned growth and comprehensive economic development                                                                                                                                                                |
| General Challenges | A lack of the world's ability to coordinate policies that challenge the sustainability of a commercial sector of agriculture for the developing economy and the environmental sustainability of the sector for water as critical to economic development and that is used extensively for other purposes |
| Challenges         | The sustainability of existing water management strategies (especially water for agriculture) in the face of climate change, rapid economic growth, and increasing urbanization                                                                                                                          |
| Challenges         | Agriculture affecting water management through over-extraction as a priority, which sustainability affects the ability of water to sustain the economic activity of other countries                                                                                                                      |
| Challenges         | Agriculture income generated by the government that is essential for the development of infrastructure and the improvement of economic growth in the region                                                                                                                                              |
| Challenges         | Agriculture management of resources, especially as related to water, requires a policy that is environmentally appropriate, especially in the context of the world's water scarcity                                                                                                                      |
| Challenges         | Governmental water scarcity, a problem of increasing importance                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
