

processes using combustion gases, now the water which is already heated at a certain temperature passes to the radiant superheater for further heating. In the radiant super heater, the water is heated using the radiant heat transfer method by receiving heat from the combustion chamber. From here, it is further sent to the convection super heater for converting it into steam. In the convective super heater, the remaining water or partial steam is fully converted into vapor or steam and this superheated steam will go to the prime mover for the rotation of the turbine.

d) Explain the working of 'Open Type Gas Turbine with neat sketch.

Working:-

- It consists of a compressor, a combustion chamber and a turbine.
