Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of 10 men who did not participate in any physical activity during the study. The training group consisted of 10 men who participated in a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed at a heart rate of 150 beats per minute. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during the training sessions. The results showed that the training group had a significantly higher HR and HRR than the control group at the end of the 12-week training program. The HR increased from 70 to 80 beats per minute, and the HRR increased from 30 to 40 beats per minute. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and HRR of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the patient should do:
 - Avoid exposure to bright light at night
 - Avoid exposure to bright light during the day
- The end of the day is a good time to go to bed. The patient should try to go to bed at the same time every night. The patient should try to go to bed at the same time every night. The patient should try to go to bed at the same time every night.
