

1. There shall be no introduction to the instructions. The instructions should be written in a "...three-phrase-point structure of introduction, body, and conclusion sentence (SRI)." The instructions provided shall include all steps with step numbers, there's no introduction or body. So turn up the device. There's no review of instructions or how to troubleshoot problems in the instructions.
2. There is no defined audience for these instructions. With a clear audience, that will depict the "...The level of knowledge your readers have with the topic (SRI)." If the target audience is the people who are familiar with technology, the instructions don't have to go as far as to detail steps in the target audience will understand what they are not to do. Then the instructions would have to be step by step.
3. There's no equipment provided. That should be in the beginning of the instructions manual. With the equipment list, it could have the reader with unanswered questions. What could be added to the computer to support the recording? Questions such as that could be easily answered with an equipment list.
