

Interview Report

Goals for the Interview

I had several specific goals in mind when I approached this interview. First of all, I wanted to learn more about the processes that go into making a screenplay. As previously mentioned, I think screenplay writing is an interesting career path and I wanted to develop a deeper understanding of the mechanics that go into creating this type of document. Additionally, I wanted to expose my classmates to another form of professional writing that has never been discussed in our textbooks.

Narrative of the Interview

For this interview, the questions were sent via email. I sent him ten questions on Tuesday, November 4. He sent a reply on November 6. After analyzing the answers, I sent 5 follow up questions on November 10, which he responded to the following day.

At first, I was concerned that he might be too busy with his graduate study work to have time for my interview. Luckily, this was not the case. He answered my questions very promptly, which was a relief. Since the interview was done through email, we did not have much interaction aside from a few emails that established contact and described the project. I was sure to send emails thanking him for his time after I received his answers.

Impression of the Interview

My impression from this interview was very positive. Not only did he answer my questions in a timely manner, but his answers were also witty, insightful and fun to read. He wrote in a very conversational tone, which made his answers easy to read and relatable. Email interviews can be difficult because the interviewer is unable to get a strong read on the person they are interviewing. Despite establishing contact with my respondent, I have never met him face to face or even heard his voice before. However, I do have a verbatim transcript of his answers to my questions, which is very helpful in another sense. All in all, I was pleased with the outcome of the interview.

Impact on My View of Professional Writers

Going into this interview, I was expecting Mr. Dorsch to be an English graduate student, but he is actually is sports psychology. I found it very interesting that someone with a social science background would be writing screenplays in their free time. I think that this is very telling regarding the backgrounds of professional writers. Their degrees can be from a wide variety of fields and not limited to an English or Communication departmental degree.

As previously mentioned, this interview made me realize that writing skills can be translated into multiple different career fields. Mr. Dorsch writes using a different style for his graduate psychology classes than the screenplay format. Yet, in both cases his ability to write in a clear, concise manner culminates in a well written document. It seems that the
