Thin Sympathy Joanna R. Quinn, 2021-05-28 Transitional justice commonly defined as the process of confronting the legacies of past human rights abuses and atrocities often does not produce the kinds of results that are imagined In multiethnic divided societies like

Uganda people who have not been directly affected by harm atrocity and abuse go about their daily lives without ever confronting what happened in the past. When victims and survivors raise their voices to ask for help or when plans are announced to address that harm, it is this unaffected population that sees such plans as pointless. They complain about what they perceive as the needless time and money that will be spent to fix something that they see as unimportant and ultimately block any restorative processes. Joanna R Quinn spent twenty years working in Uganda and uses its particular case as a lens through which she examines the failure of deeply divided societies to acknowledge the past. She proposes that the needed remedy is the development of a very rudimentary understanding, what she calls thin sympathy, among individuals in each of the different factions and groups of the others suffering prior to establishing any transitional justice process. Based on 440 extensive interviews with elites and other thought leaders in government, traditional institutions, faith groups, and NGOs, as well as with women and children throughout the country, Thin Sympathy argues that the acquisition of a basic understanding of what has taken place in the past will enable the development of a more durable transitional justice process.

Economic Integration in Asia Deeparghya Mukherjee, 2019-01-14. The Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) aims to achieve greater integration between the ASEAN region and its six free trade agreement (FTA) partners: India, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, and Korea. The RCEP is the only agreement to include three economies which are among the seven biggest economies of the world: China, Japan, and India. The book opens with an introduction to the current status of economic integration and factors that would affect it and looks at key issues like non-tariff barriers, evolving investment regulations in China in the context of FTAs, connectivity initiatives to integrate the region, rules of origin in the context of value chain integration in selected sectors, as well as region-specific aspects of South Asia and South East Asia which would shape the regional economic architecture going forward. With an attempt to cover key imperatives, the book concludes by noting primary impediments to easier trade and investment flows in the region, highlighting possible policy recommendations to improve economic integration.
