■ RESEARCH—A study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) found that patients with a history of a stroke or transient ischemic attack (TIA) who were treated with aspirin had a 25% lower risk of death or disability compared with those who were not treated with aspirin. The study was a meta-analysis of 11 randomized controlled trials involving 10,000 patients. The results suggest that aspirin therapy is beneficial for patients with a history of stroke or TIA.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group was instructed to continue with their current level of activity. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program resulted in significant improvements in physical and psychological health compared to the control group. The walking program was a safe and effective intervention for improving the health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
