Politique Internationale De L'environnement:

Droit international de l'environnement Hubert Delzangles, Jean-Marc Lavieille, Catherine Le Bris, Olivier Vidal, 2025-01-28

La dégradation mondiale de l'environnement est rapide, profonde, multiforme. Le droit international de l'environnement ne peut pas lui seul protéger l'environnement mais aujourd'hui sans lui on ne peut pas protéger l'environnement. Comme étudiant, enseignant, chercheur, membre d'association ou comme citoyen n'est-il pas important de comprendre les forces et les faiblesses de ce droit ? Dans une première partie sont analysés les caractères du droit international de l'environnement travers sept chapitres : nature et objet, histoire et acteurs, enjeux et contexte, sources formelles et techniques, juridictions, application et sanctions, forces et faiblesses de ce droit. Dans une seconde partie est analysé le contenu du droit international de l'environnement travers neuf chapitres : concepts et principes, responsabilité internationale et réparation des dommages environnementaux, air, climat et espace extra-atmosphérique, eaux douces et milieu marin, sols et forêts, conservation mondiale et régionale de la nature, produits chimiques, déchets dangereux, pollutions plastiques et activités nucléaires, santé, travail et habitat, commerce international et conflits armés. Les défis du droit international de l'environnement sont clairs : renforcer son application, rendre opérationnels ses principes, combler ses lacunes, dégager des moyens institutionnels, juridiques et surtout financiers. Les auteurs adoptant une approche globale et critique en appellent un droit international de l'environnement plus complet et effectif afin de participer par des moyens démocratiques, justes, écologiques et pacifiques à la construction d'une société écologiquement viable au nom de l'intérêt commun de l'humanité.

The Prevention Principle in International Environmental Law Leslie-Anne Duvic-Paoli, 2018-05-31 The book provides a systematic and comprehensive study of the prevention principle in international environmental law.

The International Legal System in Quest of Equity and Universality Laurence Boisson de Chazournes, Vera Gowlland-Debbas, 2021-10-18 Georges Abi Saab began his writing and teaching at a time when the process of decolonization and thereafter the quest for emancipation began to make its far reaching impact on the international scene producing significant changes in the international environment both quantitatively in increasing the number of nation States and qualitatively in changing patterns of interests and claims This was bound to result in new pressures on the international legal system itself and in a questioning of the traditional Eurocentric content of international law In his work and teaching Professor Abi Saab viewed the dynamics of international law as a function of two driving forces the emergence of the third world and the sense of injustice In his view the first driving force the emergence of the third world raised the problem of exclusion exclusion from participation in the elaboration of international law and the decision making process and exclusion as beneficiaries of the resulting rules of international law At the same time this new force introduced diversity into the international scene reflecting the richness of the international community in its different facets This process remains relevant today reflecting the contemporary problem of exclusion of new actors as well as their quest for participation The second driving force the sense of injustice posed a teleological problem for him that of defining community values in order that they capture the different facets of justice whether formal or distributive So long as there is no effective organic structure international law in his view will continue to remain effectiveness oriented reflecting rather than impacting on the structures of power Nevertheless it is undeniable that there is an on going process of development of community values and interests as Georges Abi Saab wrote with reference to international crimes law like all social phenomena is a continuous unfolding a continuous process of elaboration He has also considered that the dynamics of the international legal process itself can be captured from the perspective of international organizations as vehicles for change in the international system From his early writings Georges Abi Saab approached the United Nations Charter as a blueprint both normative and institutional for a certain type of international society International institutions with all their imperfections continue for him to be the means of realization of the law of cooperation which lies at the heart of his concept of the international system The themes selected for this volume in honour of Professor Georges Abi Saab are intended to reflect his unique and pioneering contribution to the field of international law The contributors are drawn from what he has always considered to be his large family of former students in his forty years of teaching Georges Abi Saab has acted as mentor to generations of students from all over the world who have benefited from his vision insights originality and creative and stimulating use of language The contributors also include colleagues and friends who share a similar vision of the international legal system

What is a Fair International Society? Emmanuelle Tourme Jouannet, 2014-07-18 Today's world is post colonial and post Cold War These twin characteristics explain why international society is also riddled with the two major forms of injustice which Nancy Fraser identified as afflicting national societies First the economic and social disparities between states caused outcry in the 1950s when the first steps were taken towards decolonisation These inequalities to which a number of emerging states now contribute are still glaring and still pose the problem of the gap between formal equality and true equality Second international society is increasingly confronted with culture and identity related claims stretching the dividing line between equality and difference The less favoured states those that feel stigmatised but also native peoples ethnic groups minorities and women now aspire to both legal recognition of their equal dignity and the protection of their identities and cultures Some even seek reparation for injustices arising from the past violation of their identities and the confiscation of their property or land In answer to these two forms of claim the subjects of international society have come up with two types of remedy encapsulated in legal rules the law of development and the law of recognition These two sets of rights are neither wholly autonomous and individualised branches of law nor formalised sets of rules They are imperfect and have their dark side Yet they can be seen as the first milestones towards what might become a fairer international society one that is both equitable as an answer to socio economic injustice and decent as an answer to cultural injustice This book explores this evolution in international society setting it in historical perspective and examining its presuppositions and implications
