QUESTION A 60-year-old man with a 10-year history of type 2 diabetes mellitus presents with a 2-week history of increasing fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. He reports that he has been unable to eat as much as he used to and has lost about 10 pounds (4.5 kg) in the last 2 months. He has no other symptoms and no recent changes in his medications. His last hemoglobin A1c was 7.5% (59 mmol/mol).

ANSWER The most likely cause of the patient's symptoms is a complication of his diabetes mellitus, specifically a condition known as diabetic gastroparesis. This condition is characterized by delayed gastric emptying, which can lead to symptoms such as nausea, vomiting, bloating, and loss of appetite. The patient's weight loss and decreased appetite are consistent with this diagnosis. The patient's long history of diabetes and his recent weight loss suggest that this complication may have developed over time. The patient's last hemoglobin A1c was 7.5% (59 mmol/mol), which is slightly above the target range for a patient with type 2 diabetes mellitus. This suggests that his diabetes may not be well-controlled, which could contribute to the development of complications like gastroparesis. The patient's symptoms are not consistent with other complications of diabetes, such as diabetic neuropathy or retinopathy. Therefore, the most likely cause of the patient's symptoms is diabetic gastroparesis.
