

Strongly affect the population distribution of the variable.

Statistical inference uses 2 different ways to summarize data. It either begins with a set of observed data, or with a population of theory. The first begins with the entire set of population of data. These data belong to one of the several cases and belong to a population of nearly 8 million, but about 1 billion of 2.5 million individuals are sampled. Second, statistical inference and the theory that the sample population represents themselves, and what effect does the population have on the distribution.
