Several studies about patient-centered care have concluded benefits to not just patients, but practitioners and organizations as a whole.

1

Quality

Increased patient satisfaction levels and perceived quality of care, stronger ratings of care, better recoveries for discomfort and concern, and better emotional health in the early months after treatment. Planetree

2

Operations

Decreased utilization of health care services, organizations experiencing reduced total annual charges, diagnostic tests and referrals were down, length of stays were reduced, cost-per-case dropped, there were less adverse events, higher employee retention rates, a lower frequency of malpractice claims, and overall, an increase in market share. Planetree

3

Perception

Planetree's case study on Enloe Medical Centre (Enloe) identifies the tangible benefits of patient-centered care in practice. In 2007, Enloe was within the bottom 2% of patient experience across the United States—through the implementation of patient-centered care, Enloe's scores skyrocketed. As of 2023, the organization has been ranked among the top 250 hospitals nationwide for the third year in a row.
