was debated and reimagined in a range of different texts A stimulating analysis of nineteenth century poetry and physics In this groundbreaking study Tate turns to sound to tease out fascinating continuities across scientific inquiry and verse Reflecting that the processes of the universe were themselves rhythmic he shows that a wide range of poets and scientists were thinking through undulatory motion as a space where the material and the immaterial met The motion of waves Tate demonstrates was the exemplary form in the physical sciences Sound waves light energy and poetic meter were each characterized by a process of undulation that could be understood as both a physical and a formal property Drawing on work in new materialism and new formalism Tate illuminates a nineteenth century preoccupation with dynamic patterning that characterizes the undulatory as in John Herschel s words not things but forms Anna Henchman Associate Professor of English at Boston University USA This impressive study consolidates and considerably advances the field of physics and poetry studies Moving easily and authoritatively between canonical and scientist poets Nineteenth Century Poetry and the Physical Sciences draws scientific thought and poetic form into telling relation disclosing how they were understood variously across the nineteenth century as both comparable and competing ways of knowing the physical world Clearly written and beautifully structured Nineteenth Century Poetry and the Physical Sciences is both scholarly and accessible a fascinating and indispensable contribution to its field Daniel Brown Professor of English at the University of Southampton UK

Essential reading for Victorianists Tate s study of nineteenth century poetry and science reconfigures debate by insisting on the equivalence of accounts of empirical fact and speculative theory rather than their antagonism The undulatory rhythms of the universe and of poetry the language of science and of verse come into new relations Tate brilliantly re reads Coleridge Tennyson Mathilde Blind and Hardy through their explorations of matter and ontological reality He also addresses contemporary theory from Latour to Jane Bennett Isobel Armstrong Emeritus Professor of English at Birkbeck University of London UK

Fracture Phenomena in Nature and Technology Davide Bigoni,Angelo Carini,Massimiliano Gei,Alberto Salvadori,2014-04-29 This book contains contributions presented at the IUTAM Symposium Fracture Phenomena in Nature and Technology held in Brescia Italy 1 5 July 2012 The objective of the Symposium was fracture research interpreted broadly to include new engineering and structural mechanics treatments of damage development and crack growth and also large scale failure processes as exemplified by earthquake or landslide failures ice shelf break up and hydraulic fracturing natural or for resource extraction or CO2 sequestration as well as small scale rupture phenomena in materials physics including e g inception of shear banding void growth adhesion and decohesion in contact and friction crystal dislocation processes and atomic electronic scale treatment of brittle crack tips and fundamental cohesive properties Special emphasis was given to multiscale fracture description and new scale bridging formulations capable to substantiate recent experiments and tailored to become the basis for innovative computational algorithms

Climate Change-Resilient Agriculture and Agroforestry Paula Castro,Anabela Marisa Azul,Walter Leal Filho,Ulisses M. Azeiteiro,2019-01-24 This book collects wide ranging contributions such as case studies reviews reports on technological developments outputs of research studies and examples of successful projects presenting current knowledge and raising awareness to help the agriculture and forestry sectors find solutions for mitigating climate variability and adapting to change It brings the topic of ecosystem services closer to education and learning as targeted by the Framework Convention on Climate Change and the Paris Agreement the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the EU Biodiversity Strategy to 2020 Climate change and its impacts on agriculture and agroforestry have been observed across the world during the last 50 years Increasing temperatures droughts biotic stresses and the impacts of extreme events have continuously decreased agroforestry systems resilience to the effects of climate change As such there is a need to adapt farming and agroforestry systems so as to make them better able to handle ever changing climate conditions and to preserve habitats and ecosystems services
