Platinum Business Studies Memorandum June 2014:

Tin and Global Capitalism, 1850-2000 Mats Ingulstad, Andrew Perchard, Espen Storli, 2014-09-04 For most of the twentieth century tin was fundamental for both warfare and welfare The importance of tin is most powerfully represented by the tin can an invention which created a revolution in food preservation and helped feed both the armies of the great powers and the masses of the new urban society The trouble with tin was that economically viable deposits of the metal could only be found in a few regions of the world predominantly in the southern hemisphere while the main centers of consumption were in the industrialized north The tin trade was therefore a highly politically charged economy in which states and private enterprise competed and cooperated to assert control over deposits smelters and markets Tin provides a particularly telling illustration of how the interactions of business and governments shape the evolution of the global economic trade the tin industry has experienced extensive state intervention during times of war encompasses intense competition and cartelization and has seen industry centers both thrive and fail in the wake of decolonization The history of the international tin industry reveals the complex interactions and interdependencies between local actors and international networks decolonization and globalization as well as government foreign policies and entrepreneurial tactics By highlighting the global struggles for control and the constantly shifting economic geographical and political constellations within one specific industry this collection of essays brings the state back into business history and the firm into the history of international relations
