Abstract: A field experiment was conducted in split plot design with drip irrigation levels (0.4, 0.6 and 0.8 IW/CPE ratios) in main plot and micronutrient application methods (control, soil, foliar and fertigation) in sub-plot during Rabi season 2018 at S.K.N. College of Agriculture, Jobner (Rajasthan). The scheduling of drip irrigation at 0.8 IW/CPE ratio recorded significantly higher plant height, dry matter accumulation, silique per plant, seeds per silique, test weight and seed yield over 0.4 IW/CPE ratio, however remaining statistically at par with 0.6 IW/CPE ratio. Drip irrigation at 0.8 IW/CPE ratio recorded higher net return. Among micronutrient application methods, fertigation significantly increased plant height at 80 days after sowing and at harvest, dry matter accumulation at all growth stages, silique per plant, seeds per silique and seed yield over all other application methods. Significantly higher net return and B: C ratio was also recorded under fertigation method of micronutrient application.

India is a key player in the global oilseeds scenario with 12-15 per cent of oilseeds area, 6-7 per cent of vegetable oils production, 9-11 per cent of the total edible oils consumption and 14 per cent of vegetable oil imports. Despite of being the largest cultivator of oilseeds at the global level, India was an exporter of oil till fifties and now become a major importer of edible oil. Nutrient and irrigation management are the most important agronomic factors that affect the yield of Indian mustard (Brassica juncea L.). Drip irrigation is one of the most efficient methods of irrigation and it is viewed as a promising technology for its ability to support farmers in raising incomes (IWMI). A number of benefits have been ascribed to the use of drip irrigation. In addition to saving of water these include increased yield and productivity of crops, labour cost savings, electricity savings, lesser pumping hours and hence easier irrigation, better crop growth and also better soil health. In IW/CPE approach, known amount of irrigation water is applied when cumulative pan evaporation reaches predetermined level. For practical purpose irrigation should be started when allowable depletion of available moisture in the root zone reaches. The available water is soil moisture which lies between field capacity and permanent wilting point. Thus irrigation scheduling provides information to the managers to develop irrigation strategies for each plot of field on the farm.

Multiple micronutrient deficiencies are emerging at a faster rate in intensively cultivated high production areas due to greater removal of soil micronutrients through annual biomass harvest of 15-20 tonnes ha⁻¹. The deficiency range of micronutrients especially Zn and B in oilseed growing soils emphasizes the need to focus immediate attention on balanced nutrient management practices. The production of mustard in the region, state and in country often suffers from a higher degree of variation in the annual production owing to their predominant cultivation under low and uncertain rainfall situations and further handicapped by input starved conditions with poor crop management. There is limited scope for expansion of area under mustard and also the irrigation. Increasing the vertical growth in productivity is the feasible option. Fertigation is a modern agro technique, combining water and fertilizer application through irrigation provides an excellent opportunity to both maximize yield and minimize environmental pollution. It localizes the water supply and this triggers the development of a restricted root system that requires frequent replenishment of the nutrients. Applying nutrients in the irrigation water may satisfy this requirement. In a fertigation system, the timing, amounts, concentrations and ratios of the nutrients are easily controlled. Due to this improved control, crop yields are greater than those produced by a simple fertilizer application and irrigation system. Therefore, as a result of the shift from surface irrigation to drip method of irrigation, fertigation becomes the most common fertilisation in the irrigated agriculture. The use of soluble and compatible fertilisers,
