

A photograph of a man from behind, looking down a street in Baghdad. He has dark, curly hair and is wearing a dark jacket. A green backpack is slung over his shoulder. The street is paved and has some puddles. In the background, there are buildings and a few other people walking. The lighting suggests it might be late afternoon or early morning.

Return To Baghdad Photographic Impressions Of An Expatriate:

Return to Baghdad: Photographic Impressions of an Expatriate Mo Shaban, 2014-12-24 Freelance photographer and expatriate Mo Shaban returns to his hometown Baghdad in late 2012 to find a landscape and a people much transformed after over a quarter of a century of living in America Seeking to come to terms with what he had witnessed he set out to photographically chronicle his over four months of living among its long suffering people Mo's photographs are intuitive They are at once candid and imaginative Each developed in its own merit artistically This book's included images culled from thousands taken add an important human element to the often two dimensional narrative of war photojournalists often favor Incredibly this level of photography was achieved with a simple Canon sx400 camera and under considerable security risk In late 2014 many of these photos were featured at the Iraqi Cultural Center Gallery in Washington DC among critical acclaim
