communication visual rhetoric and political discourse in the region Style, Mediation, and Change Janus Mortensen, Nikolas Coupland, Jacob Thøgersen, 2017 Technologically mediated talk is organized around familiar styles of person relationship and genre But media also consistently remake and re style these familiar patterns This book brings together original research on media styling in different national contexts and languages written by authors at the forefront of sociolinguistic research on mediated talk It highlights and theorizes how creative acts of mediated styling can promote social and sociolinguistic change The globalized world is already massively mediatized what we know about language people and society is necessarily shaped through our engagement with media But talking media are caught up in wider currents of rapid change too Creative innovations in media styling can heighten reflexive awareness but they can also unsettle existing understandings of language society relations In reporting new investigations by expert researchers this book gives an original and timely account of how style media and change need to be integrated further to advance the discipline of sociolinguistics Active Learning in College Science Joel J. Mintzes, Emily M. Walter, 2020-02-23 This book explores evidence based practice in college science teaching It is grounded in disciplinary education research by practicing scientists who have chosen to take Wieman s 2014 challenge seriously and to investigate claims about the efficacy of alternative strategies in college science teaching In editing this book we have chosen to showcase outstanding cases of exemplary practice supported by solid evidence and to include practitioners who offer models of teaching and learning that meet the high standards of the scientific disciplines Our intention is to let these distinguished scientists speak for themselves and to offer authentic guidance to those who seek models of excellence Our primary audience consists of the thousands of dedicated faculty and graduate students who teach undergraduate science at community and technical colleges 4 year liberal arts institutions comprehensive regional campuses and flagship research universities In keeping with Wieman s challenge our primary focus has been on identifying classroom practices that encourage and support meaningful learning and conceptual understanding in the natural sciences The content is structured as follows after an Introduction based on Constructivist Learning Theory Section I the practices we explore are Eliciting Ideas and Encouraging Reflection Section II Using Clickers to Engage Students Section III Supporting Peer Interaction through Small Group Activities Section IV Restructuring Curriculum and Instruction Section V Rethinking the Physical Environment Section VI Enhancing Understanding with Technology Section VII and Assessing Understanding Section VIII The book s final section IX is devoted to Professional Issues facing college and university faculty who choose to adopt active learning in their courses The common feature underlying all of the strategies described in this book is their emphasis on actively engaging students who seek to make sense of natural objects and events Many of the strategies we highlight emerge from a constructivist view of learning that has gained widespread acceptance in recent years In this view learners make sense of the world by forging connections between new ideas and those that are part of their existing knowledge base For most students that knowledge base is riddled with a host of naive notions misconceptions and alternative conceptions they have acquired throughout their lives To a considerable extent the job of the teacher is to coax out these ideas to help students understand how their ideas differ from the scientifically accepted view to assist as students restructure and reconcile their newly acquired knowledge and to provide opportunities for students to evaluate what they have learned and apply it in novel circumstances Clearly this prescription demands far more than most college and university scientists have been prepared for

There is an extensive literature conducted from a range of theoretical perspectives and methodologies on the role of groups and student learning in higher education However here the concept of the group is heavily contested at a theoretical level but within higher education practice characterizing the group has tended to be clear cut Groups of students are often formed within the parameters of specific educational programs to address explicitly defined learning objectives These groups are often small scale and achieve tasks through cooperative or collaborative learning Cooperative learning involves students dividing roles and responsibilities between group members so learning becomes an independent process and outcome On the other hand collaborative learning involves students working together by developing shared meanings and knowledge to solve a task or problem From this perspective learning is conceptualized as both a social process and individual outcome That is collaborative learning may facilitate individual student conceptual understanding and hence lead to higher academic achievement The empirical evidence is encouraging as has been shown that students working collaboratively tend to achieve higher grades than students working independently However the above perspectives on student engagement assume that groups are formed within the confines of formal learning environments e g lecture theaters involve students on the same degree program have the explicit function of achieving a learning task and disband once this has been achieved However students may also use existing social networks such as friendship groups as a mechanism for learning which may occur outside of formal learning environments There is an extensive literature on the role and benefits of friendship groups on student learning within primary and secondary education but there is a distinct lack of research within higher education This ebook is innovative and ambitious and will highlight and consolidate the current understanding of the role that student based engagement behaviors may serve in effective pedagogy A unique aspect of this research topic will be the fact that scholars will also be welcome to submit articles that describe the efficacy of the full range of approaches that have been employed to facilitate student engagement across the sector

The Digital Literary Sphere Simone Murray,2018-10-01 How has the Internet changed literary culture 2nd Place N Katherine Hayles Award for Criticism of Electronic Literature by The Electronic Literature Organization Reports of the book's death have been greatly exaggerated. Books are flourishing in the Internet era widely discussed and reviewed in online readers forums and publicized through book trailers and author blog tours. But over the past twenty five years digital media platforms have undeniably transformed book culture. Since Amazon's founding in 1994 the whole way in which books are created marketed publicized sold reviewed showcased consumed and commented upon has changed dramatically. The digital literary sphere is no mere appendage to the world of print it is where literary reputations are made movements are born and readers passionately engage with their favorite works and authors. In The Digital Literary Sphere Simone Murray considers the contemporary book world from multiple viewpoints. By examining reader engagement with the online personas of Margaret Atwood John Green Gary Shteyngart David Foster Wallace Karl Ove Knausgaard and even Jonathan Franzen among others Murray reveals the dynamic interrelationship of print and digital technologies. Drawing on approaches from literary studies media and cultural studies book history cultural policy and the digital humanities this book asks: What is the significance of authors communicating directly to readers via social media? How does digital media reframe the live author reader encounter? And does the growing army of reader reviewers signal an overdue democratizing of literary culture or the atomizing of cultural authority? In exploring these questions The Digital Literary Sphere takes stock of epochal changes in the book industry while probing books and digital media's complex contemporary coexistence.

Learning in Later Life Trish Hafford-Letchfield, 2016-06-17 Within the UK and Europe government legislation and policies concerned with demography have asserted a paradigmatic shift towards the increased engagement of older people with public services. The philosophy of user involvement and co production within these contexts has become integral to finding ways in which to improve the wellbeing of older people and their experiences of ageing well. Whilst this area has been steadily emerging within the educational field in relation to the lifelong learning of older people there has been a relative under theorization and a lack of empirical research however into the lifelong learning needs opportunities and experiences of those older people using social care who are typically marginalized from these debates and developments This book address this gap by paying specific attention to examining what opportunities might be present within care services and public services in general for older people using social care to capitalize on the skills and knowledge they might need to achieve more person centred support Through developing a debate and argument for the convergence of the lifelong learning agenda with social policy and social care its core argument focusses on the challenge of sustainability of the care and support of older people The author explores how social care could engage more meaningfully with concepts such as social capital and the challenges associated with achieving a genuine co productive approach towards the quality of experience of older people using social care This book will be an essential read for professionals working with older people in health and social care as well as those engaged with gerontology and ageing studies in education and practice
