Mandela was born on July 18, 1918 and died on December 5, 2013 following a recurring lung infection. The renowned world figure finally succumbed to his illness at the age of 95 years, marking the end of a long illustrious political life. Apart from his praiseworthy political life, Mandela was also known for his unwavering desire to fight for human freedom not only in his home country, but in the entire world.

During his active years, Mandela was a truly great leader who always dedicated his life for the service of humanity (Kalungu-Banda, 2006). In fact, his leadership qualities would transcend the borders of culture, race, and language among other social factors. There is no doubt that Mandela's bold and exemplary achievements in life really changed the world, thus making him a real hero of many people.

From the days he was constantly involved in the struggle against apartheid through the many years he served in prison, Mandela has succeeded to change the world in many ways. For example, he was not ready to let anything stand between him and his strong will to fight for the freedom of his people.

Mandela was a great man who never gave up on seemingly impossible ideals, and for that reason, nothing would make him change his principles (Bolman & Deal, 2006). His dedication and commitment was beyond personal interests, and this can be observed in his outright rejection of Botha's decision to offer him conditional amnesty in 1985.

The amnesty was offering Mandela freedom from prison, but on the condition that he should stop being resistive of the law. Mandela simply felt that, by accepting the offer he would be betraying his enduring principles and what he had been fighting for over the years. Instead, Mandela chose to remain behind the bars for the rest of his life and by putting his feet down in defense of his people's rights, his long struggle would finally grant South Africans their freedom.

Mandela was also known for his exemplary acts of humility, the one aspect which enabled him to achieve most of his goals in life. His whole life was based on real selfless dedication of service to humanity. Throughout his entire resistance on the evils
