In recording such transactions, participants should be guided by the key of the rule relating to the taxpayer's interest in the underlying property being the transferor's ownership or beneficial enjoyment thereof at the time of the transfer. When a transferor makes a gift of property which he owns outright, the transferee should be treated as the owner, regardless whether he has sufficient rights for enjoyment or control over the property thereafter. Where a transferor transfers property which he does not own outright, the transferee should be treated as the owner if the transferor retains no substantial interest in the transferred property.
