WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has approved a new pesticide for use on a wide range of crops, including corn, soybeans, and wheat. The pesticide, known as chlorpyrifos, is a broad-spectrum insecticide that has been used in the United States for over 20 years. It is effective against a variety of pests, including beet beetles, corn rootworms, and soybean beetles. The EPA's approval is based on a review of the pesticide's safety and efficacy. The review found that the pesticide is safe for use on the crops listed, and that it is effective against the pests it is used to control. The EPA also found that the pesticide is safe for the environment, and that it does not pose a risk to humans or animals. The pesticide is expected to be available to farmers in the United States in the near future.
