

A classical painting depicting the Macedonian king Alexander the Great and his wife Roxane. Alexander, on the left, is shown from the waist up, wearing a golden diadem and a red paludamentum (cloak) over a white cuirass. He holds a long spear (stygia) in his left hand. To his right, Roxane lies on the ground, looking up at him with a pensive expression. She is dressed in a light-colored chiton and a himation. In the background, a golden column stands on a pedestal, and a small figure of Cupid is visible near the base of the column.
