In cats anesthetized lightly with pentobarbital or alpha chloralose electrical stimulation of the paramedian lobule of cerebellum resulted in a change of EEG pattern Prior to stimulation the pattern consisted of high amplitude slow waves with superimposed low amplitude fast activity In addition the EEGs of animals anesthetized with chloralose showed chloralose spikes Immediately following brief cerebellar stimulation the slow wave activity and spikes disappeared leaving only low voltage fast activity The effect was most pronounced in the contralateral leads from the rostral portions of the cerebrum Study of the parameters most effective in evoking this effect revealed that stimulation frequency train duration and probably pulse duration affected the duration of suppression in a sigmoid fashion with inflection points at approximately 90 Hz 2.5 sec and 1 msec respectively Above threshold values stimulation current showed an approximately linear relationship to duration of EEG suppression The after discharge resulting from focal electrical stimulation of the cerebral cortex could be shortened by electrical stimulation of the paramedian lobule The effect was essentially the same when cerebellar stimulation preceded occurred during or followed the cerebral cortical stimulation The great variability of the after discharge resulting from cerebral cortical stimulation as well as the variability of the effects of cerebellar stimulation made it impractical to study systematically the parameters optimal for shortening after discharge Such a study will require use of an awake preferably partially restrained animal with electrodes chronically implanted Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.),1985 First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965-70 History of North Carolina John Wheeler Moore,1880
