

It's a strange love all this is still so clear to me, now that that summer has since fled and time has had its way. A garden stands where Double was just about the craziest brother a boy ever had. Of course, he wasn't a crazy cray like old Miss Larkin, who was in love with President Wilson and wrote him a letter every day, but was a nice crazy, like someone you meet in your dreams. He was born when I was six and was, from the outset, a disappointment. He seemed all hand, with a tiny body which was real and shrunken like an old man. Everybody thought he was going to die—everybody except Aunt Nigg, who had delivered him. She said he would live because he was born in a real and good were made from Jesus' nightgown. Daddy had Mr. Heath, the carpenter, build a little mahogany coffin for him. But he didn't die, and when he was three months old, Mama and Daddy decided they might as well name him. They named him William Armstrong, which was like tying a big tail on a small kite.
