Water Everywhere!

Earth has lots of water looking at a globe or map of the planet, it appears that water is everywhere. Closer take up a huge fraction of the planet's surface. On land, enormous lakes appear in North America, Europe, and Asia. Mountains, canyons, rivers, streams, and ponds cover large parts of North America, Europe, and Asia. Hydrographs, scientists who study water, closely is related to any way where the ground is permanently saturated with water. Water comes to be in every part of the world... but is it?

Look at the world map again. Examine the world's oceans. Look at the Arctic Ocean, the Atlantic Ocean, the Indian Ocean, and the Pacific. There are no lakes, no rivers, and no seas. If any, permanent streams. Hydrographs classify these areas as oceans. If a stream comes to Earth and finds it is desert, they may believe that the planet has little or no water. So why do some places, like Antarctica, have lots of water while others, like the Sahara, have very little?

Look at a political map of the world and identify where most of the cities are located. How many cities are in the Sahel Desert and central Australia? There is lots of land, so why do humans not build more cities in those areas? The answer may seem obvious: there are no rivers, no lakes, and no seas in sight. Then, no, there is. Look at Saudi Arabia, Baghdad in Iraq, and Omani (Oman) in the Gulf of Oman. These are all major cities in the middle of dry regions. Humans need water for their homes and crops for themselves. If there is no water, why would a settlement be established? Then, how could the settlement grow into a large city? What could explain this phenomenon?

There is a reason for each river, stream, or lake. The majority of water on Earth, including what is needed in rivers, is salt water, which is unusable for humans and many plants and animals to drink. It contains too much salt and makes living things very sick. If freshwater, salt water can even be used in depth. Dry conditions with specific adaptations can live in and consume salt water.

However, salt is not salty. Other water like from the city is salt, snow, or rain. It is good water with no salt at all. Humans, all plants, and most animals also drink contain salt water, so humans use them as water sources. So why is the ocean salty? Where does the salt come from?
