

Connection help

Don't know if you're connecting to router or extender?

The extender's status LEDs are designed to give you a visual cue as to whether it's connected to your hub/router or to your sub-router. It's your choice that controls which signal it connects to.

Can't connect extender to router

- If the range lights continue to blink (on & off) for more than 10 minutes after connection attempts, check your router or sub-router to ensure it's properly receiving your extender's clear signal.
- If your router offers two internal antennas and the extender has two (one for 2.4 GHz and one for 5 GHz), try changing the 2.4 GHz antenna to the 5 GHz antenna (or vice versa).
- If you're trying to use WPS to connect to your router, try using the WPS button on the extender. Sometimes, it may be that it's incompatible with the WPS function on the router.
- To troubleshoot the extender (if it shows On and repeat blink on & off), it's difficult. Follow the steps in Method 2 to reset the extender using the WPS button.
- If you're unable to connect using Method 1, check you have selected the correct wireless network and you've entered the correct wireless key.

Can't connect to internet

- Check your router is connected to the internet and your Wi-Fi is working correctly.

Can't connect your devices to internet

- Make sure your device is correctly set up to connect to your sub-router before trying to use the extender.
- Make sure all wires and other cables of equipment are correctly plugged into the correct signal.
- Check the lights on your extender and make sure you're in the correct range. If not, see the section 'Move extender to optimum location'.
- The following faults and settings will affect wireless performance:

All lights are off

- Check the power outlet is working and not overloaded.
- Check the extender is turned on (the Power light is on the top).

Light status

Light	Status	Meaning
	On	Extender receiving correctly
	Off	Extender turned off
	Red	Extender not configured correctly to sub-router
	On	Up to range 1
	Off	Extender connecting to sub-router
	Red	A warning for range class 1 error, check your host
	On	WPS connection successful (green off after 10 seconds)
	Flashing	A confirmation in progress in faster flashing
	Off	No WPS connection in progress

The band switch

This switch lets the frequency band your extender uses to connect to the sub-router. The switch is a band-pass filter that lets 2.4 GHz or 5 GHz signals through, blocking other signals. If you have a dual-band sub-router (e.g. 802.11n), then it is 5 GHz, unless the 802.11n band may require performance (e.g. 802.11n) as there is less interference.

To change to the 5 GHz band, simply the frequency band switch on the 2.4 GHz band, you can move it to the 5 GHz band.

Following the 5 GHz band, you can move the range and you will need to move the extender closer to your sub-router.

Reset to factory settings

It's possible to reset the extender to its factory settings. This is useful if you're having trouble connecting your extender to your sub-router.

1. Hold down the extender's Reset button for 10 seconds.
2. Press the Reset button for 1 second to return factory default settings.

Using the ethernet cable

This can be used to connect the extender to the sub-router. You can also use the extender as a router. In your network diagram.
