

Case 5-2 North Country Auto, Inc.

George G. Liddy, part owner of North Country Auto, Inc., was feeling pretty good about the new control systems recently put in place for his five department managers (new and used car sales, service, body, and parts departments). Exhibit 1 describes each department. Mr. Liddy strongly believed in the concept of evaluating each department individually as a profit center. But he also recognized the challenge of getting his managers to "buy in" to the system by working together for the good of the dealership.

Background

North Country Auto, Inc., was a franchised dealer and factory-authorized service center for Ford, Saab, and Volkswagen. Multiple franchises were becoming more common in the 1980s. But the value of multiple franchises did not come without costs. Each of the three manufacturers used a different computerized system for tracking inventory and placing new orders. They also required their dealerships to maintain an adequate service facility with a crew of trained technicians that, in turn, necessitated carrying an inventory of parts to be used in repairs. Exhibit 2 gives balance sheet data with a breakout of investment for each product line. North Country also operated a body shop, and in mid-1989 opened a "while-you-wait" oil change service for any make of vehicle.

The dealership was situated in an upstate New York town with a population of about 20,000. It served two nearby towns of about 4,000 people as well as rural areas covering a 20-mile radius. North Country began operations in 1989, and in 1992 moved one mile down

North Country Mary Lethert Wingerd, 2010-06-07. In 1862, four years after Minnesota was ratified as the thirty-second state in the Union, simmering tensions between indigenous Dakota and white settlers culminated in the violent six-week long U.S. Dakota War. Hundreds of lives were lost on both sides and the war ended with the execution of thirty-eight Dakotas on December 26, 1862, in Mankato, Minnesota, the largest mass execution in American history. The following April, after suffering a long internment at Fort Snelling, the Dakota and Winnebago peoples were forcefully removed to South Dakota, precipitating the near destruction of the area's native communities while simultaneously laying the foundation for what we know and recognize today as Minnesota. In North Country: The Making of Minnesota, Mary Lethert Wingerd unlocks the complex origins of the state, origins that have often been ignored in favor of legend and a far more benign narrative of immigration, settlement and cultural exchange. Moving from the earliest years of contact between Europeans and the indigenous peoples of the western Great Lakes region to the era of French and British influence during the fur trade and beyond, Wingerd charts how for two centuries prior to official statehood, Native people and Europeans in the region maintained a hesitant, largely cobeneficial relationship. Founded on intermarriage, kinship and trade between the two parties, this racially hybridized society was a meeting point for cultural and economic exchange until the western expansion of American capitalism and violation of treaties by the U.S. government during the 1850s wore sharply at this tremulous bond, ultimately leading to what Wingerd calls Minnesota's Civil War. A cornerstone text in the chronicle of Minnesota's history, Wingerd's narrative is augmented by more than 170 illustrations chosen and described by Kirsten Delegard in comprehensive captions that depict the fascinating, often haunting representations of the region and its inhabitants over two
