How people handle their stress is a critical piece of evidence that can make the difference between a successful and a failed business negotiation. You can't negotiate against someone's ego; you can only negotiate against someone's interests. So, if you can understand how people handle their stress, you can negotiate more effectively.

These two paragraphs describe the proposed model and outline the paper. The first paragraph is the main body of the paper, and the second paragraph is the conclusion.

These groups appear to represent a full spectrum of more complex gene networks. In each case, the genes are highly co-expressed. The genes in each group are also highly correlated with the expression of the other genes in the group. This suggests that the genes in each group are highly co-regulated.
