effect is a frequency characteristic of a particular type of human speech as well as a characteristic of the language itself. It is necessary that letters should be produced in a certain frequency spectrum. This efficiency depends on the degree of articulation of the speech. Speech can be divided into three parts: the beginning, the middle, and the end. The beginning part is the most important for the understanding of the speech. The middle part is the most important for the understanding of the speech. The end part is the most important for the understanding of the speech.
