

Human Geography : Nature and Scope

Introduction

Geography is an independent discipline that studies space, earth, its phenomenon, origin of human societies, their culture as well as their interaction with the surrounding environment. Geography is integrative, empirical and practical.

Integrative means geography is a combination of different elements which are taken from various fields and sub-fields. These elements form an effective and comprehensive system of study.

On the other hand, geography is empirical and practical too. Empirical and practical means that geography is associated with observed data or phenomena. These observed phenomena are based on factual and applied facts.

Thus, geography consists of different subject matter, which have been taken from different fields and also the observed data.

Geography is associated with dualism. In simple terms, it is divided into two fields, namely, physical geography and human geography.

Human Geography

Human Geography is a branch of geography which studies the relationship between human and natural worlds, spatial distribution of human phenomena and the socio-economic differences between various regions of the world. It is concerned with the cultures, economies, population, settlements, urban and rural phenomenon etc. It is different from physical geography i.e. it has a greater focus on studying the human environment activities and their relation with the natural environment.
