Subotic, Professor of Political Science Jelena Subotic, 2025-10-09 An illuminating exploration of the relationship between the restitution of looted art global status and the international construction of national cultural heritage Why is art restitution a matter of politics How does the artwork displayed in national museums reflect the international status of the state that owns it Why do some states agree to return looted art and others resist National art collections have long been a way for states to compete with each other for status prestige and cultural worth in international society In many former imperial nations however these collections include art looted during imperial expansions and colonial occupations While this was once a sign of high international standing the markers of such status particularly in the context of art have since significantly changed A new international legal and normative architecture governing art provenance developed after World War II and became institutionalized in the 1990s and 2000s Since then there have been national and global social movements demanding the return of looted art This shift has established not only that looting is wrong but more importantly that restitution is morally right As a result of this reframing of what it means to own art an artifact's historical provenance has become a core element of its value and the search for provenance and demands for restitution a direct threat to state status The same objects that granted states high international status now threaten to provoke status decline In The Art of Status Jelena Subotic examines this relationship between the restitution of looted art and international status with a focus on the Parthenon Elgin Marbles the Benin Bronzes and a collection of paintings looted during the Holocaust that are now housed at the Serbian National Museum Subotic tells the story of these artworks how they were looted how they ended up on display in national museums and how the art restitution disputes have unfolded While these cases are different in terms of their historical context of looting and ownership claims the movements for their restitution and resistance to it illustrate the larger questions of how national cultural heritage is internationally constructed and how it serves states desire for international status and prestige An in depth and nuanced account of art restitution disputes The Art of Status illuminates the shifting political significance of art on the international stage from ownership to restitution

Crime and the Media Sarah E.H. Moore, 2017-09-16 From video games that allow us to participate in Mafia style violence to newspaper reports about the latest terrorist atrocity from detective novels that fill our bedside cabinets to Hollywood's beloved legal dramas the mass media is saturated with stories about crime justice and disorder Together they create a cultural landscape of crime that is distinctly at odds with reality as criminologists are apt to complain Crime and the Media attempts to make sense of this cultural landscape and its relationship with broader social trends and public attitudes Through focussed critical discussions about crime in the media taking on crime news and fictional representations of cops courts and corrections the text equips students with an understanding of the key theoretical concepts and methodological tools that are required to undertake media analysis With questions for discussion exercises and workshop sessions as well as techniques for analysing crime in a range of media formats the book makes an invaluable contribution to crime and media courses and to the social sciences in general Research Methods in

Yan, 2019-09-24 This book explores how news media construct social issues and events and thereby convey certain perceptions within the scope of framing theory By operationalizing media framing as a process of interpretation through defining problem diagnosing causes making moral judgments and suggesting solutions the book proposes a systematic and transparent approach to images in news discourse Based on a frame analysis it examines how German news media framed a list of China related issues and events and thereby conveyed particular beliefs and opinions on this country Moreover it investigates whether there were dominant patterns of interpretation and the extent to which diverse views were evident by comparing two major daily newspapers with opposite political orientations the FAZ and the taz Motivated by the relationship between image and reality the book explores image formation and persistence from media construction of meaning and human cognitive complexity in perceiving others Media select certain issues and events and then interpret them from particular perspectives A variety of professional and non professional factors behind news making may result in biased representations In addition from a social psychological perspective inaccurate perceptions of foreign cultures may arise from categorical thinking biased processing of stimulus information intergroup conflicts of interest and in group favoritism Accordingly whether media coverage deviates from reality is not the main concern of this book instead it emphasizes the underlying logics upon which the conclusions and judgments were drawn It therefore contributes to a rational understanding of Western discourse and holds practical implications for both Chinese public diplomacy and a more constructive role of news media in promoting the understanding of others
