There has been an increasing emphasis internationally in the design and construction of sustainable pavement systems. Advances in Materials and Pavement Prediction reflects this development highlighting various approaches to predict pavement performance. The contributions discuss links and interactions between material characterization methods, empirical predictions, mechanistic modeling, and statistically sound calibration and validation methods. There is also emphasis on comparisons between modeling results and observed performance. The topics of the book include but are not limited to: Experimental laboratory material characterization, Field measurements and in situ material characterization, Constitutive modeling and simulation, Innovative pavement materials and interface systems, Non-destructive measurement techniques, Surface characterization, tire surface interaction, pavement noise, Pavement rehabilitation, Case studies. Advances in Materials and Pavement Performance Prediction will be of interest to academics and engineers involved in pavement engineering. Nanostructured Materials and Nanotechnology II Sanjay Mathur, Mrityunjay

Singh, 2009-04-13 A collection of papers from The American Ceramic Society's 32nd International Conference on Advanced Ceramics and Composites held in Daytona Beach, Florida, January 27-February 1, 2008. Topics include basic and applied research in nanomaterials such as synthesis, functionalization, processing, and characterization; structure-property correlations; bio- and magnetic nanomaterials; nanostructured materials for chemical, mechanical, planarization, display, health, and cosmetic applications; nanotubes and nanowires and industrial development. Functional Foods and Food Supplements Raffaella Boggia, Paola Zunin, Federica Turrini, 2021-03-02 Recent technological advancements, socio-economic trends, and population lifestyle modifications throughout the world indicate the need for foods with increased health benefits. The clear relationship between the food that we eat and our well-being is widely recognized. Today's foods are not only intended to satisfy hunger and provide necessary nutrients; they can also confer additional health benefits such as preventing nutrition-related diseases and improving physical and mental well-being. This book provides a comprehensive overview of developments in the field of functional foods and food supplements. Readers will discover new food matrices as innovative natural sources of bioactive compounds endowed with health-promoting properties. Studies on chemical, technological, and nutritional characteristics of healthy food ingredients, analytical methods for monitoring their quality, and innovative formulation strategies are included.

Zubrick, 2008 Written for the laboratory that accompanies the sophomore junior level courses in Organic Chemistry Zubrick provides students with a valuable guide to the basic techniques of the Organic Chemistry lab The book will help students understand and practice good lab safety It will also help students become familiar with basic instrumentation techniques and apparatus and help them master the latest techniques such as interpretation of infrared spectroscopy The guide is mostly macroscale in its orientation Publisher's website The Role of Chemical Markers and Chemometrics in the Identification of Grasses Used as Food in Pre-agrarian South West Asia Michelle Cave, 2004 This work explores the way in which novel chemical criteria can be used to identify charred remains of grains of small grained grasses used as food by pre agrarian hunter gatherers in south western Asia but which have hitherto rarely been identified with any precision The grass family Gramineae or Poaceae is the most diverse abundant and widespread family of higher plants on the planet Grasses correspondingly have enormous ecological and economic importance worldwide Their importance is reflected in the prominent role of grain from wild grasses in hunter gatherer subsistence In order to reconstruct past subsistence practices and diet especially of arid zone hunter gatherers it is important to identify the remains of grasses recovered from archaeological sites However the recovered grass remains are most often charred therefore the interpretive potential can be realized only if these charred remains are accurately identified at the level of genus and in some cases species There are enormous problems in identifying charred remains particularly when relying totally on gross morphological criteria There is therefore a need for alternative criteria such as that utilized by chemical analytical techniques The core rationale in applying the different chemical techniques is the same throughout grains are taken from modern grasses of known identity and spanning a spectrum of taxa likely to include all the charred ancient specimens to be identified the unknowns These modern grains are then analysed to generate spectra Equivalent spectra from unknowns are then compared with those from the modern grains to effect an identification Standard practice has hitherto involved comparing the two sets of spectra know and unknowns by visual inspection i e by eye However identifications based on such comparisons are inevitably to some degree untestable and unrepeatable and this represents a long standing problem in chemistry generally In the present project the author has therefore explored the use of chemometrics i e the use of statistical systems to compare spectra in a manner that is rigorously testable and repeatable This is an entirely new development and has never previously been applied in the analysis of archaeological data The Student's Lab Companion John W. Lehman, 2008 This comprehensive lab companion provides enough theory to help students understand how and why an operation works but emphasizes the practical aspects of an operation to help them perform the operation successfully in the lab For undergraduate or graduate students taking organic chemistry lab This comprehensive lab companion provides enough theory to help students understand how and why an operation works but emphasizes the practical aspects of an operation to help them perform the operation successfully in the lab The Second Edition makes substantive revisions of many operations to clarify existing material and add new information More environmentally friendly i e green lab experiments are encouraged Ideal for professors who write their own lab experiments or would like custom labs but need a source for lab operations and safety information Latent Heat-Based Thermal Energy Storage Systems Amritanshu Shukla, Atul Sharma, Pascal Henry Biwolé, 2020-09-27 In light of increasing human induced global climate change there is a greater need for clean energy resources and zero carbon projects This new volume offers up to date coverage of the fundamentals as well as recent advancements in energy efficient thermal energy storage materials their characterization and technological applications Thermal energy storage TES systems offer very high energy savings for many of our day to day applications and could be a strong component for enhancing the usage of renewable clean energy based devices Because of its beneficial environmental impact this technology has received wide attention in the recent past and dedicated research efforts have led to the development of novel materials as well to innovative applications in very many fields ranging from buildings to textile healthcare to agriculture space to automobiles This book offers a valuable and informed systematic treatment of latent heat based thermal energy storage systems covering current energy research and important developmental work The 1997 Jubilee Research Event ,1997 This showpiece of IChemE s 75th anniversary celebrations allows young researchers to show their work to a critical international audience Art Matters
