Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a training group (TRN). The TRN group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The CON group did not exercise. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The TRN group showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or continuous darkness. Tapes that are too long or too short can change the phase of the clock.
- Artificially imposed rhythms will eventually overrule all but the most robust specifications, the length of the season may still be important for the well known migratory patterns.
- The endogenous clock keeps time, it may change the phase of the cycle but the period is fixed, predicting the time of day, night, dawn and dusk for these periods of activity, sleep, and rest is important for the 24 hour cycle.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, suppose the price for the output rises. The producer will want to produce more of the output, and this will require hiring more workers. The producer will also want to use more of the other inputs, and this will require hiring more of those inputs. The producer will also want to use more of the other inputs, and this will require hiring more of those inputs.
