Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 30 to 45 years of age, who were randomly selected from a local health club. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of six women who did not participate in any physical activity during the study. The training group consisted of six women who participated in a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed on a treadmill at a speed of 3.0 mph and a 5% incline. The HR and EE were measured at the beginning and end of the study. The HR and EE of the training group increased significantly from the beginning to the end of the study, while the HR and EE of the control group remained relatively stable. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively increase the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.
