

The background of the book cover features a silhouette of a man and a young child standing on a hill. The man is in the foreground, facing away from the viewer with his right arm raised in a fist. The child is slightly behind him, also facing away. An American flag is visible on a pole between them. The background shows a city skyline under a dramatic, cloudy sky with a bright light source, possibly the sun, creating a silhouette effect.

Pilyugin,2012-12-06 This book is based on a one year course of lectures on structural stability of differential equations which the author has given for the past several years at the Department of Mathematics and Mechanics at the University of Leningrad The theory of structural stability has been developed intensively over the last 25 years This theory is now a vast domain of mathematics having close relations to the classical qualitative theory of differential equations to differential topology and to the analysis on manifolds Evidently it is impossible to present a complete and detailed account of all fundamental results of the theory during a one year course So the purpose of the course of lectures and also the purpose of this book was more modest The author was going to give an introduction to the language of the theory of structural stability to formulate its principal results and to introduce the students and also the readers of the book to some of the main methods of this theory One can select two principal aspects of modern theory of structural stability of course there are some conventions attached to this statement The first one let us call it the geometric aspect deals mainly with the description of the picture of trajectories of a system and the second let us say the analytic one has in its centre the method for solving functional equations to find invariant manifolds conjugating homeomorphisms and so forth Pamphlets on Temperance ,1817 The classical review ,1897
