November 2011 Electrical Trade Theory Memorandum Paper:

Investigating Interdisciplinary Collaboration Scott Frickel, Mathieu Albert, Barbara Prainsack, 2016-11-25

Interdisciplinarity has become a buzzword in academia as research universities funnel their financial resources toward collaborations between faculty in different disciplines. In theory interdisciplinary collaboration breaks down artificial divisions between different departments allowing more innovative and sophisticated research to flourish. But does it actually work this way in practice? Investigating Interdisciplinary Collaboration puts the common beliefs about such research to the test using empirical data gathered by scholars from the United States, Canada, and Great Britain. The book's contributors critically interrogate the assumptions underlying the fervor for interdisciplinarity. Their attentive scholarship reveals how, for all its potential benefits, interdisciplinary collaboration is neither immune to academia's status hierarchies nor a simple antidote to the alleged shortcomings of disciplinary study. The Electrical Review, 1915

The Engineering-Business Nexus Steen Hyldgaard

Christensen, Bernard Delahousse, Christelle Didier, Martin Meganck, Mike Murphy, 2018-11-14. Fascinating and compelling in equal measure, this volume presents a critical examination of the multilayered relationships between engineering and business. In so doing, the study also stimulates ethical reflection on how these relationships either enhance or inhibit strategies to address vital issues of our time. In the context of geopolitical, economic, and environmental tendencies, the authors explore the world that we should want to create and the role of the engineer and the business manager in this endeavor. Throughout this volume, the authors identify periods of alignment and periods of tension between engineering and business. They look at focal points of the engineering-business nexus related to the development of capitalism. The book explores past and present movements to reshape, reform, or reject this nexus. The volume is informed by questions of importance for industry as well as for higher education. These are: What kinds of conflict arise for engineers in their attempts to straddle both professional and organizational commitments? How should professionals be managed to avoid a clash of managerial and professional cultures? How do engineers create value in firms and corporations? What kinds of tension exist between higher education and industry? What challenges does the neoliberal entrepreneurial university pose for management faculty, students, society, and industry? Should engineering graduates be ready for work, and can they possibly be? What kinds of business issues are reflected in engineering education curricula, and for what purpose? Is there a limit to the degree of business hybridization in engineering degree programs, and if so, what would be the criterion for its definition? Is there a place in engineering education curricula for reflective critique of assumptions related to business and economic thinking? One ideal of management and control comes to the fore as the Anthropocene: the world transformed into an engineered artefact which includes human existence. The volume raises the question as to how engineering and business together should be considered, given the fact that the current engineering-business nexus remains embedded within an economic model of continual growth.

By addressing macro level issues such as energy policy sustainable development globalization and social justice this study will both help create awareness and stimulate development of self knowledge among practitioners educators and students thereby ultimately addressing the need for better informed citizens to safeguard planet Earth as a human life supporting system

PLATE: Product Lifetimes And The Environment Conny A. Bakker,2017-11-15 Product lifetimes are critical for the circular economy resource efficiency waste reduction and low carbon strategies for sustainability and are therefore of interest to academics from many different disciplines as well as original equipment manufacturers OEMs and other stakeholders The challenges related to product lifetimes must be tackled from multiple perspectives making the sharing of knowledge and expertise from different disciplines particularly important This book presents papers from the second Product Lifetime and the Environment PLATE conference held in Delft the Netherlands in November 2017 The conference originated from the desire to bring together academic researchers working in the field of sustainability to benefit from each other s knowledge and further advance the field The book includes the 88 full papers delivered at the conference grouped according to the following 7 conference themes design for product longevity product lifetime optimization cultural perspectives on the throwaway society circular economy and product lifetimes business opportunities economic implications and marketing strategies consumer influences on product lifetimes and policy regulation and legislation The book will be of interest to all those concerned with sustainable consumption circular economy and resource efficiency
