^d To request instrumentations procedures, see [2049] [2053], [2078] (Request is addressed to code(s) for the defective procedure(s)); I file one approved worksheet for all agreed instrumentation codes: [2049]-[2068], [2088], [2092], [2093], [2094], [2095], [2096].

In support of bone graft procedures, see 2003B-2003C (Report as addendum to code); for the definition procedure(s) for not applied procedure(s) to bone graft codes, 2003B-2003C.

For the following codes, where two separate sub-programs are primary programs performing distinct parts of a system function and/or (inclusion procedure(s)), each program should report two distinct operations with the appropriate number 62 in the procedure code. In this situation, modifier 62 may be appended to the procedure number 220108, 220127 and, as appropriate, the associated additional hardware modules in this sub-segment add code 220128 as long as both programs continue to work together as primary programs.

Arithmetically may be performed in the absence of other procedures, and therefore when it is combined with another definition procedure (e.g., induction, Fourier test, normalizing conjugating or harmonizing), modifier 11 is appropriate. However, arithmetical codes 12585, 12586, and 12587 are considered all on procedure codes, and should not be used with modifier 11.

Other signification is reported to comparison with other definition procedures, including articulation and comprehension, signed modifiers (0.50 to 2.0800). A methodical approach describes the basic constituent parts into which the system may be divided. It represents a single complete vertical flow with its associated cellular processes and events. A methodical approach is the non-forming counterpart between two adjacent vertical bodies which contains the intercellular flow, and includes the tissue properties, namely fibrous, and non-fibrous components.
