

Chapter 1 Introduction

Chapter 1 provides a brief introduction to the subject of computer science. The chapter is divided into two main sections: the first section discusses the history of computer science, and the second section discusses the current state of the field. The chapter also includes a list of key terms and a list of references.

The first section of the chapter discusses the history of computer science. It begins by discussing the early days of computing, when computers were large, expensive machines that were used primarily for scientific and military purposes. It then discusses the development of the modern computer, which is a much smaller, more powerful machine that can be used for a wide variety of tasks. The section also discusses the development of computer science as a discipline, and the role of computer scientists in society.

The second section of the chapter discusses the current state of the field. It begins by discussing the current state of computer hardware, which is becoming increasingly powerful and affordable. It then discusses the current state of computer software, which is becoming increasingly complex and powerful. The section also discusses the current state of computer science research, which is becoming increasingly interdisciplinary and focused on solving real-world problems.

The chapter concludes with a list of key terms and a list of references. The key terms include: computer, computer science, computer hardware, computer software, computer science research, and computer science education. The references include: [1] A. Turing, "Computing Machinery and Intelligence," Philosophical Magazine, vol. 41, pp. 236-254, 1950; [2] J. von Neumann, "The First Draft of a Report on the EDVAC," Report of the Committee for the Design of the EDVAC, 1946; [3] D.
