Abstract

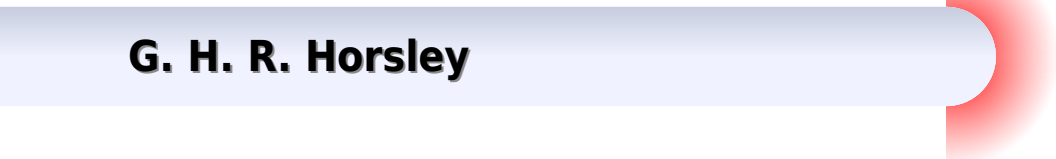

David Andrew Wilson, the award-winning, internationally acclaimed author and film producer, has a journey to tell. His unique personal narrative of overcoming lifelong hearing, cognitive disabilities, and depression will shake up scientific understandings of the brain's self-healing capabilities. In terms of the ability to make such efforts as people become more independent, Wilson believes recovery is not only possible, but that it is the nature of it. Multiple processes work together in a single dynamic that means that a single high incident (such as the severity of a concussion) can lead to multiple effects. Wilson's experiences as a child, a student, a filmmaker, and a speaker continue to fuel his passion for understanding the brain's ability to heal.
